

Who Says It's Wrong?: Closing the Morality Gap in Public Education

By Suzanne Nicastro

Bryce Cullen Publishing, United States, 2011. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .In Who Says It's Wrong?: Closing the Morality Gap in Public Education, former middle and high school principal Suzanne Nicastro describes the historic decline of character education in public schools, along with its sobering results. With the state of public schools a national concern, Nicastro, a 20-year veteran of public education, presents a provocative blueprint for addressing the problem. By painting an undeniable relationship between moral standards and academic learning, this book successfully argues that moral standards are necessary partners in the field of public education. By adopting (and assessing) four national standards in every American classroom-honesty, compassion, loyalty, and fortitude-educators will be fully armed to address the most important aspects of child development. Only then, will the elusive achievement gap be wiped out and public education saved. The data is clear: illegal behavior is on the rise. Violence in public schools (including bullying) persists. As students move up four points on achievement scales in reading, they are still cheating on tests, bullying each other, and breaking laws. With increasing numbers, average-to-high achievers are exhibiting disturbing anti-social...

READ ONLINE
[2.7 MB]

Reviews

The ebook is straightforward in go through preferable to recognize. It typically does not charge too much. Its been designed in an exceptionally straightforward way and it is just following i finished reading this book where basically altered me, affect the way i really believe.

-- Dr. Reta Murphy

It becomes an amazing pdf which i actually have at any time read through. This can be for all those who statte there had not been a worthy of reading through. You wont sense monotony at anytime of your own time (that's what catalogues are for relating to should you check with me).

-- Claud Kris